

Xerox

Extensible Interface Platform

Now you can control your business and content management processes directly from your Xerox multifunction device.

Xerox Extensible Interface Platform (EIP) enables you to use the basic content management features in Xerox DocuShare from your Xerox multifunction device. When you scan a document, you can send it directly to Xerox DocuShare from the touch screen of your EIP-enabled device. This allows you to instantly and easily organize, archive, and use your paper-to-digital content, generating efficiencies throughout your organization.

Here's how DocuShare content management is accessed from the touch screen of an EIP-enabled multifunction device, and how it allows you to quickly and strategically put your documents to work.

The touch screen of an EIP-enabled device allows you to easily scan a document into DocuShare, or find a document you need.

1. Log in by providing your DocuShare user ID and password via the touch screen or by swiping a secure access card. DocuShare uses your login information to give you access to the appropriate collections and documents, based on the objects' permissions.

2. Navigate the DocuShare site using a clearly organized folder structure. Additionally, you can search the site to find the collection you want as well as locate a specific document by displaying alphabetized document lists.

3. All basic DocuShare content management features are available to you at the device, enabling you to:

- Add new documents and new versions of documents by scanning them (creates PDF or TIFF files)
- View the properties of documents
- Print documents (PDF, TXT, JPEG, and TIFF formatted files)
- Initiate a document workflow by triggering a predefined process when a document is scanned and added to a collection

Xerox DocuShare and EIP-enabled multifunction devices provide your organization with a proven, end-to-end content creation and management solution that helps you work smarter, saving time and money.

For more information, visit docushare.xerox.com

Xerox DocuShare®